Quarterly Update

HC Stirling House Dynamic Fund

31st March 2019

Investment Objective

To achieve long term capital growth.

Investment Policy

The Fund will seek to achieve its investment objective by gaining exposure predominantly to global equities with some exposure to money market instruments, fixed interest securities, cash and near cash. The investment manager may allocate the Fund towards particular investment themes, geographic areas and sectors. The Fund may be expected to have a relatively high degree of volatility.

It is anticipated that the Fund may be almost wholly invested through collective investment schemes. As the Fund grows in size, it is intended that the Fund will invest less in collective investment schemes and instead invest to a greater extent or wholly directly (where permitted) into the asset classes set out above.

The Fund may also invest directly or indirectly in other transferable securities and collective investment schemes which may have exposure to alternatives such as commodities, loans, hedge funds, private equity and property.

Performance Commentary

Sentiment recovered in Q1 2019 as fears of monetary tightening in the West, slowing Chinese Growth and a worsening China-US trade conflict abated. Perhaps most significantly Fed Chairman Jerome Powell, highlighted the need to be 'patient' in assessing future rate hikes, contradicting his more hawkish December comments which spooked markets. Forecasts for US rate rises this year dropped from two to zero and combined with dovish tones in Europe supported near universal rallies in markets. US 10-year bond yields dipped below 2.5%, and global equities retraced losses incurred in December. The funds posted strong absolute and relative returns over the quarter Technology benefited whilst traditionally defensive sectors lagged.

For instance, Mastercard had a strong start to the year after issuing encouraging commentary on their outlook and strong underlying operating metrics, alleviating concerns of slowing growth in the payments sector. A similar story is true of the funds other technology holdings, such as data centre provider Equinix and Google parent Alphabet which both performed strongly.

In contradistinction, ME Group (operator of exchanges in listed derivatives) gave back some gains from last year on lower market volatility – we had taken some profits in January.

A number of alternative holdings, which rely on higher levels of leverage, were sold and the proceeds reinvested into favoured equities.

Fund Outlook from Sarasin & Partners

Despite this market recovery, the global economy is cooling with growth set to remain sluggish in H1 2019 as the US nears full employment and Europe’s manufacturing sector languishes on weaker Chinese trade. However, there are indications that these trends may be weakening rather than intensifying. Further policy stimulus in China is likely to revive global trade. Consumer spending continues to fuel growth, supported by rising real wages and a tight labour market. Gentler rhetoric from central banks and lukewarm inflation forecasts suggest that it is unlikely that we will see tightening in the near future, supporting markets.

Political risks persist with Brexit, the China-US trade war and European elections causing uncertainty over the global economy. These risks are modest at present, but escalation would likely destabilize markets and lead to increased volatility, without necessarily causing long-term harm.

The risk of a Trump policy shock seems somewhat contained as he attempts to gain favour leading up to the 2020 presidential election.

Overall, the risk of near term global recession has reduced and growth seems more likely to pick up later this year. This should lead to a supportive environment for equities but subject to periods of volatility as policy makers encounter and respond to exogenous shocks. Whilst fixed income receives support from accommodative monetary policy, bonds are likely to be an impediment to total returns whilst income is insufficient to compensate for capital loss. We still expect to add most value from equities and hold the view that the outlook remains fair for good quality companies operating in the right areas of the global economy despite the challenges of a slower growth world.
