Quarterly Update

DMS Stirling House Dynamic Fund

30th June 2022

Investment Objective

To achieve long term capital growth.

Investment Policy

The Fund will seek to achieve its investment objective by gaining exposure predominantly to global equities with some exposure to money market instruments, fixed interest securities, cash and near cash. The investment manager may allocate the Fund towards particular investment themes, geographic areas and sectors. The Fund may be expected to have a relatively high degree of volatility.

It is anticipated that the Fund may be almost wholly invested through collective investment schemes. As the Fund grows in size, it is intended that the Fund will invest less in collective investment schemes and instead invest to a greater extent or wholly directly (where permitted) into the asset classes set out above.

The Fund may also invest directly or indirectly in other transferable securities and collective investment schemes which may have exposure to alternatives such as commodities, loans, hedge funds, private equity and property.

Performance Commentary

Persistent inflation and central bank monetary policy tightening were the most notable factors that affected markets during the second quarter. In most developed economies, excluding Japan, the higher cost of energy, goods, services and food conspired to drive inflation to levels not seen in decades.

In response to this environment, equity and bond markets came under pressure. Alternative assets also suffered, but gold performed relatively better in its role as a defensive asset.

Contributors to returns included US pharmaceutical group Merck, after it reported better than expected earnings. AIA, a leading provider of pensions and protection in Asia, also performed well.

Conversely, ASML, the world's leading supplier to the semiconductor industry, came under pressure due to tighter financial conditions and detracted from performance. Having been a top performer over several years, the lithography producer's valuation was more susceptible than others. Middleby, the kitchen equipment manufacturer, suffered as investors became increasingly concerned about the cost of raw materials used to make kitchen equipment.

In light of the challenging market conditions, the fund started a position in the Brevan Howard Absolute Return Fund. It has a strong track record and aims to generate uncorrelated absolute return primarily in the government bond market. We also steadily reduced the fund's position in equities in favour of cash, in appreciation of the rising risk environment. In addition we began to move some of the fund's position into government bonds, with the expectation that most of the negative momentum has passed.

Fund Outlook from Sarasin & Partners

The outlook for inflation and the ongoing Russia-Ukraine conflict remain among the key concerns for investors. Raising interest rates amid a slowing economic environment – while also unwinding monetary stimulus – has led to fears this might induce a recession. The long-term effects of Russian sanctions and rising oil prices due to the war in Ukraine will only be known in the months ahead.

As events are changing with remarkable speed, we continue to monitor risks to the outlook. At present, this has led to a preference for high-quality, defensive assets that are well-positioned to withstand the implications of geopolitical events.

Other challenges also require close monitoring. Rising inequality must be tackled, while the climate crisis is an unprecedented threat to humanity. Corporations and investors have a role to play in both instances, seeking to support innovation and development through effective capital allocation.

Despite the challenges, we remain focused on the opportunities inevitably provided during times of great upheaval. While the outlook for risk assets have deteriorated in the first half of this year, there are reasons to be optimistic that the drawdown in markets should be relatively brief.

Firstly, the inflation that has driven central banks to tighten monetary policy is heavily influenced by the effect of higher energy prices following the war in Eastern Europe. If energy prices stabilise, inflation should come down naturally over the course of the next year, allowing central banks more flexibility in their policy-setting. Households and banks are also better capitalised than previous years. They have more ability to withstand higher prices and disruption before altering their spending or lending actions.

In the short term, asset markets may continue to fall as inflation remains high, resulting in our decision to maintain our defensive positioning through asset allocation and stock selection. Ultimately, the upheaval in markets since the start of the year has led to an improved long-term outlook for multi-asset portfolios and we will continue to monitor opportunities that arise from falling valuations.
