Quarterly Update

DMS Stirling House Dynamic Fund

31st December 2022

Investment Objective

To achieve long term capital growth.

Investment Policy

The Fund will seek to achieve its investment objective by gaining exposure predominantly to global equities with some exposure to money market instruments, fixed interest securities, cash and near cash. The investment manager may allocate the Fund towards particular investment themes, geographic areas and sectors. The Fund may be expected to have a relatively high degree of volatility.

It is anticipated that the Fund may be almost wholly invested through collective investment schemes. As the Fund grows in size, it is intended that the Fund will invest less in collective investment schemes and instead invest to a greater extent or wholly directly (where permitted) into the asset classes set out above.

The Fund may also invest directly or indirectly in other transferable securities and collective investment schemes which may have exposure to alternatives such as commodities, loans, hedge funds, private equity and property.

Performance Commentary

Inflation showed further signs of weakening over the final quarter of 2022. This led to an equity market rally in October and November as investors bet that interest rates would not have to rise as far as previously predicted.

China's shock decision to remove Covid restrictions following a series of protest against the Dynamic Zero Covid policy caused a sharp rally in Chinese equities, despite the country facing a significant death toll in the coming months.

The dollar weakened significantly as US government bond yields fell and a Bank of Japan adjustment to the yield curve caused the yen to strengthen significantly. Meanwhile, the gold price recovered and commodity prices benefited from China reopening.

Among the positive contributors to fund performance was EssilorLuxottica, which delivered better-than-expected sales in eyewear solutions. AIA Group also strengthened, helped by the fact that Chinese equities and China-exposed companies were among the better performers. Elsewhere, Siemens was a beneficiary of warmer-than-expected weather in Europe which reduced the prospects of a natural gas shortage and an industrial shut down over the winter.

The detractors included SVB Financial, which suffered from slowing venture capital and initial public offering (IPO) activity, as well as rising fees on deposits, which caused a significant downgrade in the company's earnings estimates. Medtronic continued to struggle as medical procedure volumes remained low compared to pre-pandemic levels, partly because of staffing shortages in hospitals and slow recovery in supply chains. The share price of Home REIT fell following a note from a short seller which frightened investors and created selling pressure, despite a counter statement from management.

The managers added to the holding in Tencent given the improving regulatory and economic environment in China. Meanwhile, reports on NextEra's unethical lobbying practices and behaviour towards whistle-blowers prompted a complete sale of the holding.

Fund Outlook from Sarasin & Partners

The outlook for inflation and interest rates remain among the key concerns for investors, although there is now some hope that interest rates may not need to rise as much as previously feared. Meanwhile, events in Ukraine are changing with remarkable speed, and we continue to monitor risks to the outlook. The relaxation of China's Zero Covid Policy should support global growth but may also support global inflation if it leads to a resurgence in oil and commodity prices.

Other challenges also require close monitoring. The significant and rapid tightening of financial conditions over the past year may have unintended consequences for business activity and market functionality. Generally, company earnings will be put under pressure in the coming year as global growth slows and liquidity has become more difficult to access. The opacity of private markets - which have grown significantly in the past decade - raise contagion risks for public markets. As illustrated by the UK LDI sector last year, markets that have become used to low rates may have to adjust their operating strategies.

While the outlook for assets remains challenging, there are reasons to be optimistic that economic weakness should be relatively contained. The inflation that has driven central banks to tighten monetary policy is heavily influenced by the effect of high energy prices. If energy prices continue to normalise, inflation should come down over the course of the next year, allowing central banks more flexibility in their policy-setting. Households and banks are also better capitalised than in previous years. This means they have more ability to withstand higher prices and disruption before altering their spending or lending actions.

Finally, the price action that has taken place in markets has been meaningful. Valuations now appear more reasonable than they have been, affording a more diverse opportunity set for investors seeking to make returns across a selection of assets. In such times, patience and diligence can lead to superior investment returns. At present, this has led to a preference for high-quality, defensive assets that are well-positioned to withstand the implications of the current market outlook.
