Performance Commentary

Equity markets recovered in the opening quarter of 2023, as economic data proved more resilient than anticipated. A milder-than-expected winter supported a pronounced recovery in European markets. US markets recovered less than their European counterparts as several bank failures sparked concerns over the health of the financial system. Swift action from the Federal Reserve helped to abate concerns for the most part however a tightening of lending standards and a subsequent reduction in growth is now considered the likeliest of outcomes. Emerging markets gave back a lot of their early outperformance as the Chinese reopening continues to stutter.

The fund benefited from its holding in Reckitt Benckiser. Positive results driven by strong sales growth within its health and nutrition division alongside their ability to pass on inflation to consumers helped the shares to rally in March.

Meta continued its strong performance year to date with a combination of investor flows into the company and its rigorous redundancy programme claiming another 10,000 jobs. Given the struggles of the mega caps last year, it would appear that Mark Zuckerberg's "Year of Efficiency" is hitting the right note with investors.

The turmoil in banks caused share prices in the sector to plummet. Clients withdrew money due to liquidity and insurance fears following the collapse of some banks, including Silicon Valley Bank (SVB). Linked to the SVB turmoil, the venture capital operating company, Molten Ventures affected performance as investors grew concerned that early-stage companies might struggle for additional funding in the later stages of development.

In terms of activity, the managers trimmed their position in Daikin as it had approached its fair value.

Fund Outlook from Sarasin & Partners

The outlook for inflation and interest rates remain among the key concerns for investors, although there is now some hope that interest rates may not need to rise as much as previously feared. Meanwhile, events in Ukraine are changing with remarkable speed, and we continue to monitor risks to the outlook. The relaxation of China's Zero Covid Policy should support global growth but may also support global inflation if it leads to a resurgence in oil and commodity prices.

Other challenges also require close monitoring. The significant and rapid tightening of financial conditions over the past year may have unintended consequences for business activity and market functionality. Generally, company earnings will be put under pressure in the coming year as global growth slows and liquidity has become more difficult to access. The opacity of private markets - which have grown significantly in the past decade - raise contagion risks for public markets. As illustrated by the UK LDI sector last year, markets that have become used to low rates may have to adjust their operating strategies.

While the outlook for assets remains challenging, there are reasons to be optimistic that economic weakness should be relatively contained. The inflation that has driven central banks to tighten monetary policy is heavily influenced by the effect of high energy prices. If energy prices continue to normalise, inflation should come down over the course of the next year, allowing central banks more flexibility in their policy-setting. Households and banks are also better capitalised than in previous years. This means they have more ability to withstand higher prices and disruption before altering their spending or lending actions.

Finally, the price action that has taken place in markets has been meaningful. Valuations now appear more reasonable than they have been, affording a more diverse opportunity set for investors seeking to make returns across a selection of assets. In such times, patience and diligence can lead to superior investment returns. At present, this has led to a preference for high-quality, defensive assets that are well-positioned to withstand the implications of the current market outlook.
